David, aged 21, has pleaded guilty under s20 of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861 of maliciously wounding his friend, Luke.

David and Luke were walking home. Luke made a rude comment about David's grandfather. David lashed out at Luke, causing him to fall and hit his head. As a result of David's actions, Luke's head bled heavily and he had to be taken to hospital for stitches.

Robert had decided to clear his garage of rubbish. By the time he had loaded his car, the local refuse site had closed. Robert decided to unload the rubbish onto a piece of land not far from the refuse site. Robert believed that this land was part of the refuse site as there was no boundary fence. However, unknown to Robert, the land belonged to Sara who had security camera footage of him unloading the rubbish. Sara had to pay for the rubbish to be legally disposed of. After reviewing the security camera footage, Sara discovered that Robert had unloaded his rubbish onto her land on three separate occasions, costing her £2,000 to clear the site on each occasion.

- (c) Assess rights and remedies of Sara against Robert in connection with the trespass to land.

- 5 John wanted to buy a car from Safi, a car dealer. John checked the manufacturer's website for the type of car he wished to purchase. He then told Safi that he wanted an electric car with a range of 200 kilometres. After purchasing the car from Safi, John discovered that it only had a range of 150 kilometres because the manufacturer's website was incorrect.

Artem, aged 18, had just passed his test and also wanted to buy a car from Safi. Artem told Safi he needed a car that that was cheap to run. On Safi's advice, he bought a model 'A' car that he was assured was very reliable. Safi failed to inform Artem that the car was very expensive to insure and run.
